New School build

The Hartlepool Mail has recently had an article suggesting the new school will be axed. Can I reassure you that this is not the case. The planning committee is very happy over the actual building and the environment that it will sit in.

Questions are being asked as to how to reduce the impact of traffic in the local area and to make it as safe as possible for pedestrians and vehicles. Both coming to the school and those passing.

Discussions are on going but it is the highways department that has responsibility in looking at the various options and making a recommendation. It is not the school's role, the architects or indeed anyone working in the education department to comment as the highways department has the expertise. At the moment I do not know what they will suggest but we hope that next week a decision will be made.

Whatever decision is made it is clear that we do need to reduce the amount of cars outside school and we are going to have work with you as parents in looking at proactive ways to do this. For example, when we move to the new school parents will be asked to use the Grayfields car park to drop off children especially parents of our older children.
